

NATHEN AMIN
HENRY VII AND THE TUDOR PRETENDERS
SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 23th 2023

In 1485 Henry Tudor emerged from the Battle of Bosworth victorious. His army vanquished the forces of Richard III and according to Shakespeare over a century later, brought peace and 'prosperous days' back to England. Yet all was not well early in the Tudor reign and after three decades of conflict the kingdom was anything but settled. In this enthralling talk, bestselling Tudor historian Nathan Amin looks at the myriad conspiracies and murky plots which sought to depose the Tudor usurper early in his reign, focusing on the three pretenders whose causes were fervently advanced by Yorkist dissidents – Lambert Simnel, Perkin Warbeck and Edward, Earl of Warwick. Just how close did the Tudors come to overthrow long before the myth of their greatness had taken hold?
